For the first class of the semester (Monday, January 9), please read pages 37-48 of the Federal Income Taxation casebook. Thereafter, in general you should probably try to stay about 25 pages ahead of where we are at the end of the class. I will try to signal when we are likely to go either faster or slower than usual.

You should also read Chapter 1 of the casebook early in the semester, as it includes useful background information. Sometimes when reading the later chapters, if you’re not sure of some tax concept that is being discussed, you may find that Chapter 1 (or the Chirelstein book) is worth consulting.
