Course description

This course provides an introduction to the law governing debtor-creditor relationships and related policy concerns with an emphasis upon Article 9 of the Uniform Commercial Code, which governs the use of personal property as collateral. Although certain aspects of bankruptcy law will be introduced, the course should be viewed as a complement to rather than a substitute for an in-depth course on bankruptcy. A large proportion of classroom time will be devoted to the discussion of preset problems, which students will be expected to have read and analyzed before the class.
